Economic Outlook

The cedi is anticipated to maintain relative stability throughout the second half of 2024 due to Central Bank actions and anticipated forex support from multilateral institutions. Support from the IMF and forthcoming funding through the World Bank will strengthen forex reserves, providing essential backing for the currency. Inflation is a concern but is projected to decrease. Consumer spending in Ghana is projected to rebound, and the equity market is likely to end the year positively, driven by resurgence in financial stocks and overall economic growth.
